Home Page:

Our home page contains an image gallery we call the limelight. The original requirements required that we hand pick or curate a list of restaurants every so often. However, this requirement was too ambiguous and there were other issues. We decided to use some logical conditions to decide who should be on the limelight gallery:

1. Restaurant opened within the last 30 days.
2. Restaurant has no more than 10 reviews.
3. Restaurant must contain at least one image uploaded by the owner.
4. Randomly pick 9 from the list every time the page refreshes.
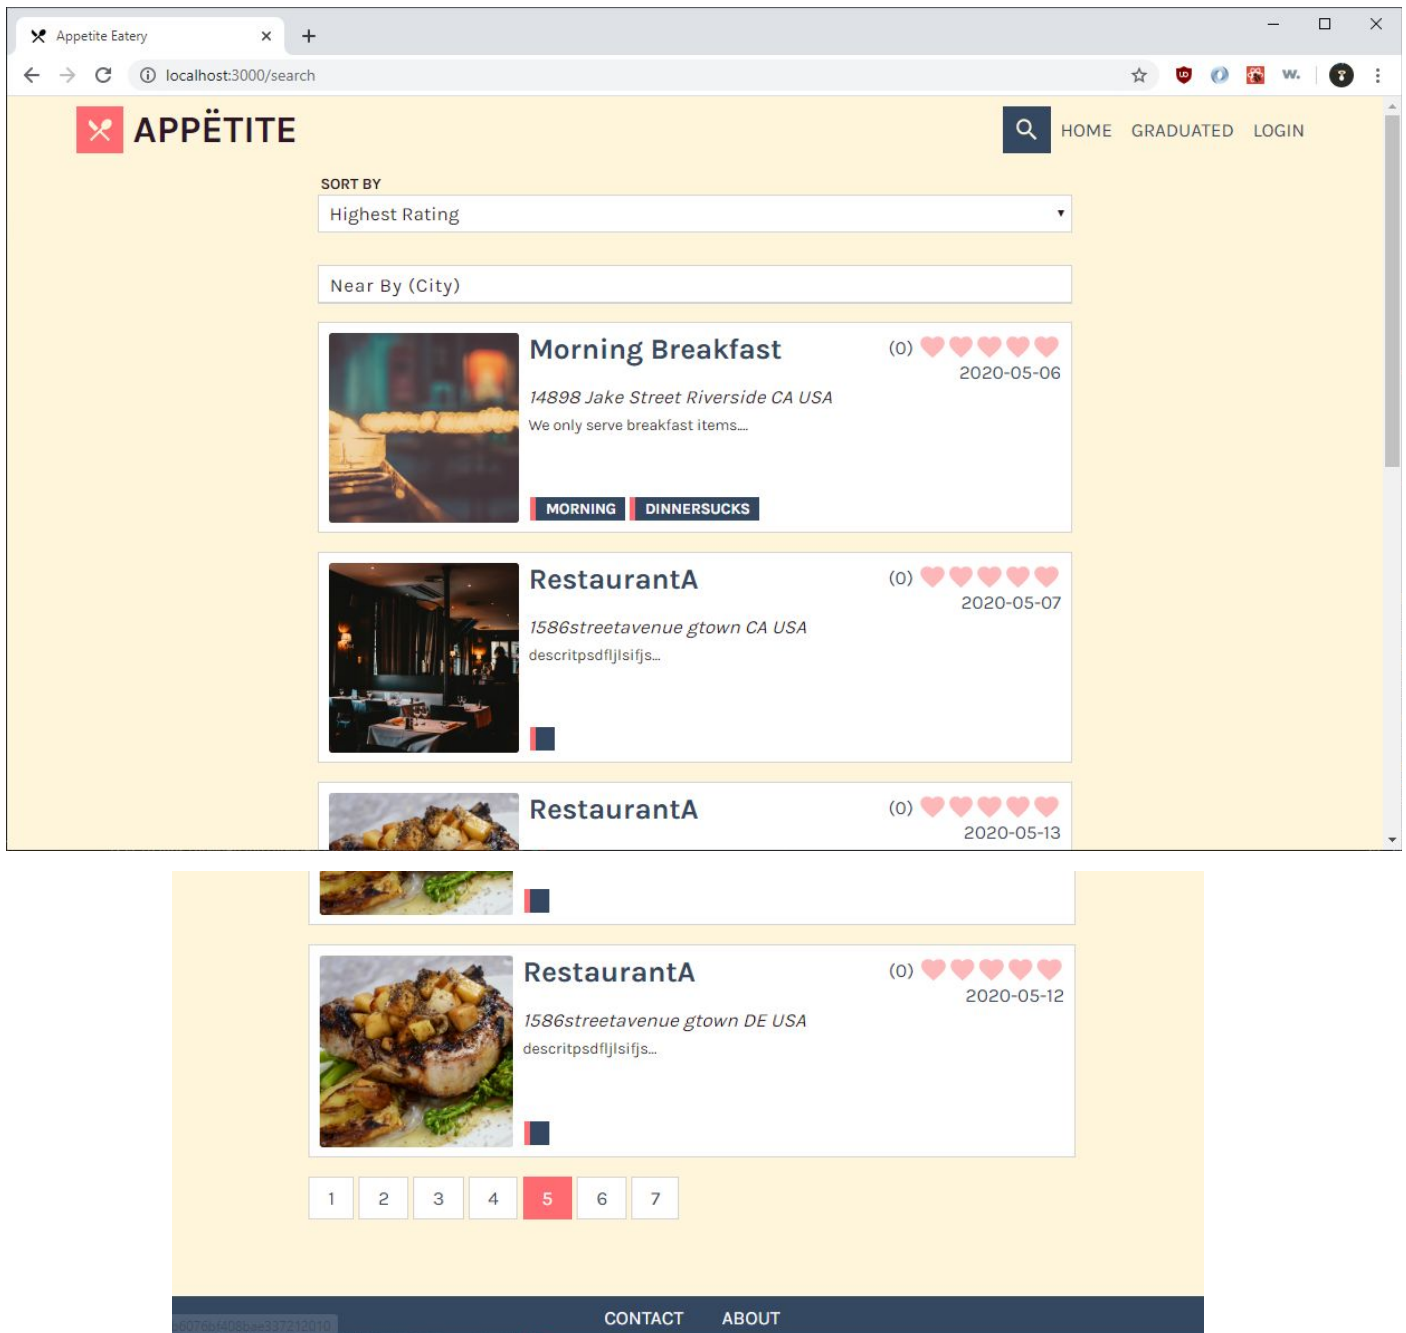

Search Page:

Our search page only searches for restaurants that have not graduated (reviews > 10). The user can sort by highest rating and date opened (new and old). There is a field filtering nearby restaurants but we did not have time to get that feature completed although the user can type and get autocomplete suggestions thanks to the google maps API. We also implemented pagination to reduce load on our pages.
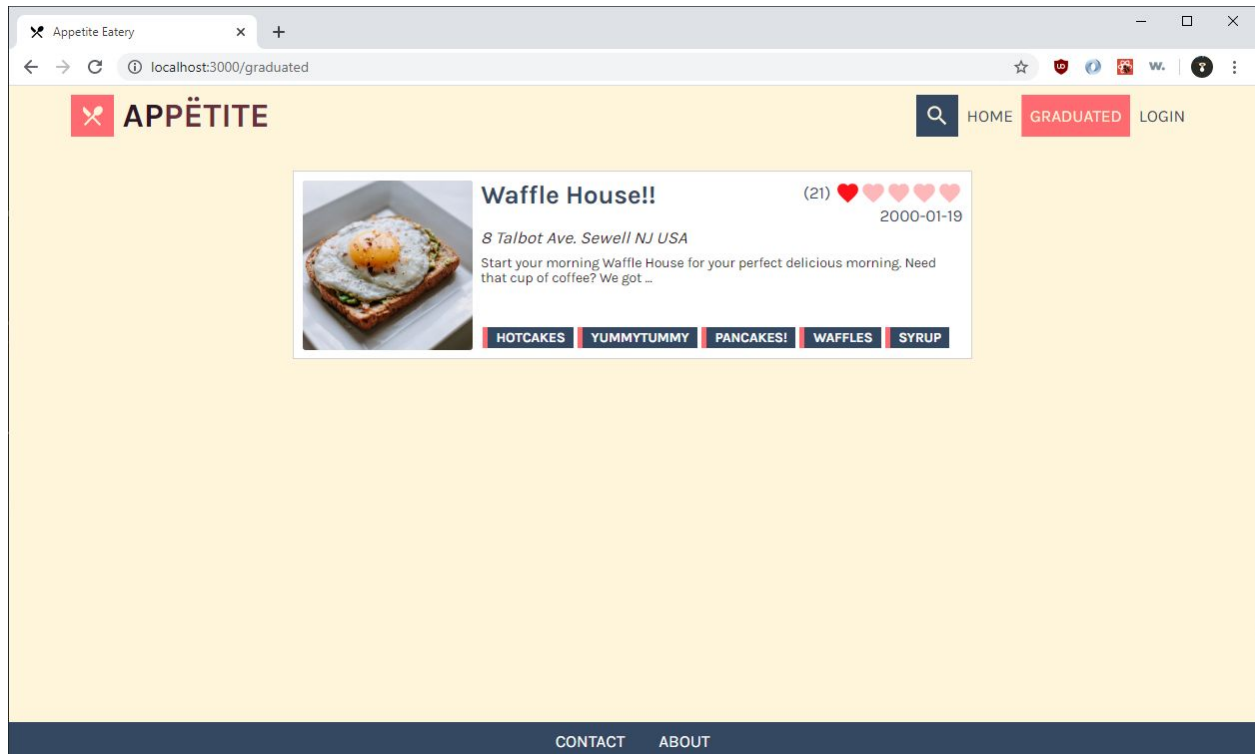

Graduated Page:

The graduated page contains ALL restaurants that do have more than 10 reviews (200 reviews was the original number, however, that requires far too much 'realistic' data for us to generate). This is where we like to keep the restaurants that are no longer "new" so that our users can focus on the new restaurants but at the same time restaurant owners who have invested time into submitting their restaurants to our website wouldn't have completely wasted their time as their restaurant has been archived.

Login and Register:

We did not have a traditional login and register page, however, our authentication components came in the form of modals. Our website supports logging in with your google account without the need to provide either an email or password.
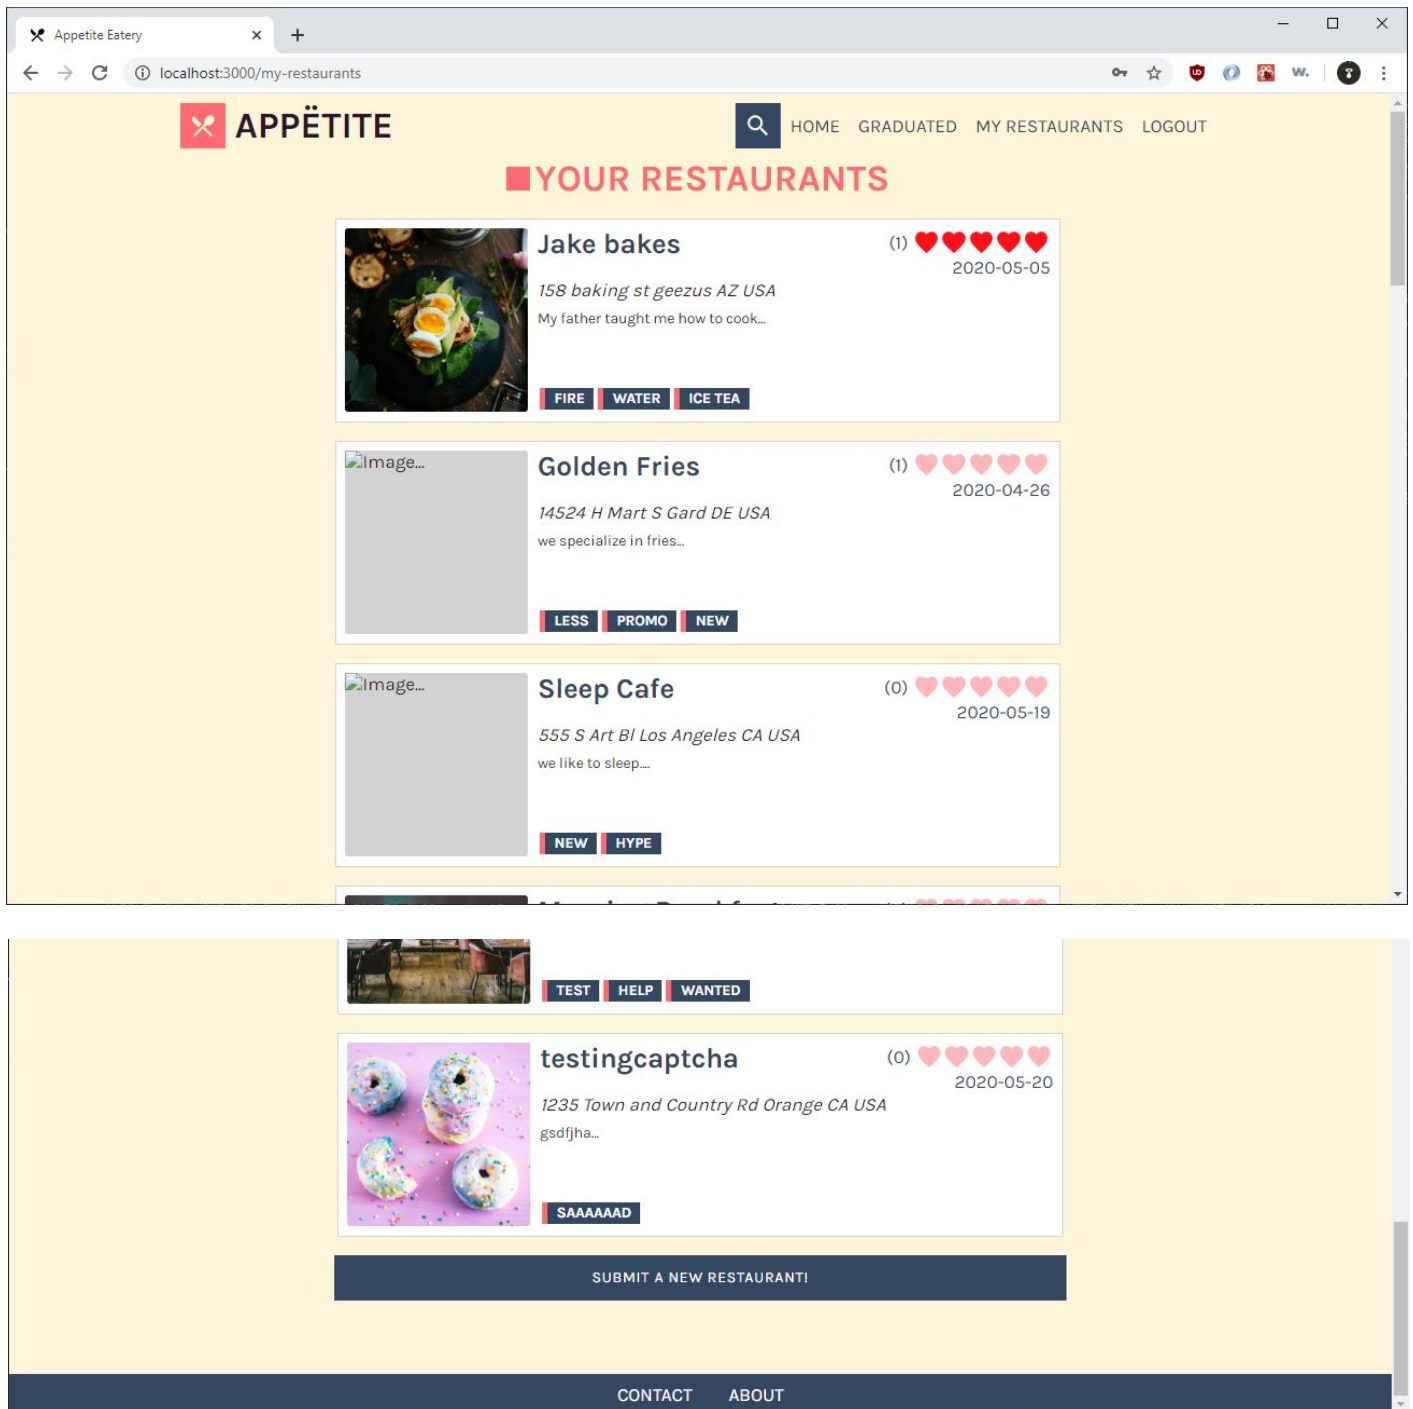

My Restaurant Page:

The 'my restaurant' page is exclusive to owner accounts. It lists a preview of all the restaurants that the owner has submitted to our websites When they click on one of the listing cards, they can view and edit their restaurant info. They can also create a new restaurant by clicking on "submit a new restaurant".
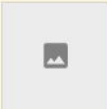

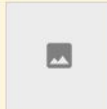

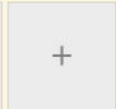

Apply page:

The apply page allows an owner account to submit a restaurant to our website. This page has many form inputs grouped into a few categories: basic information, address, restaurant images, menu images, details, hours, and tags. The tags and details are not screenshotted.
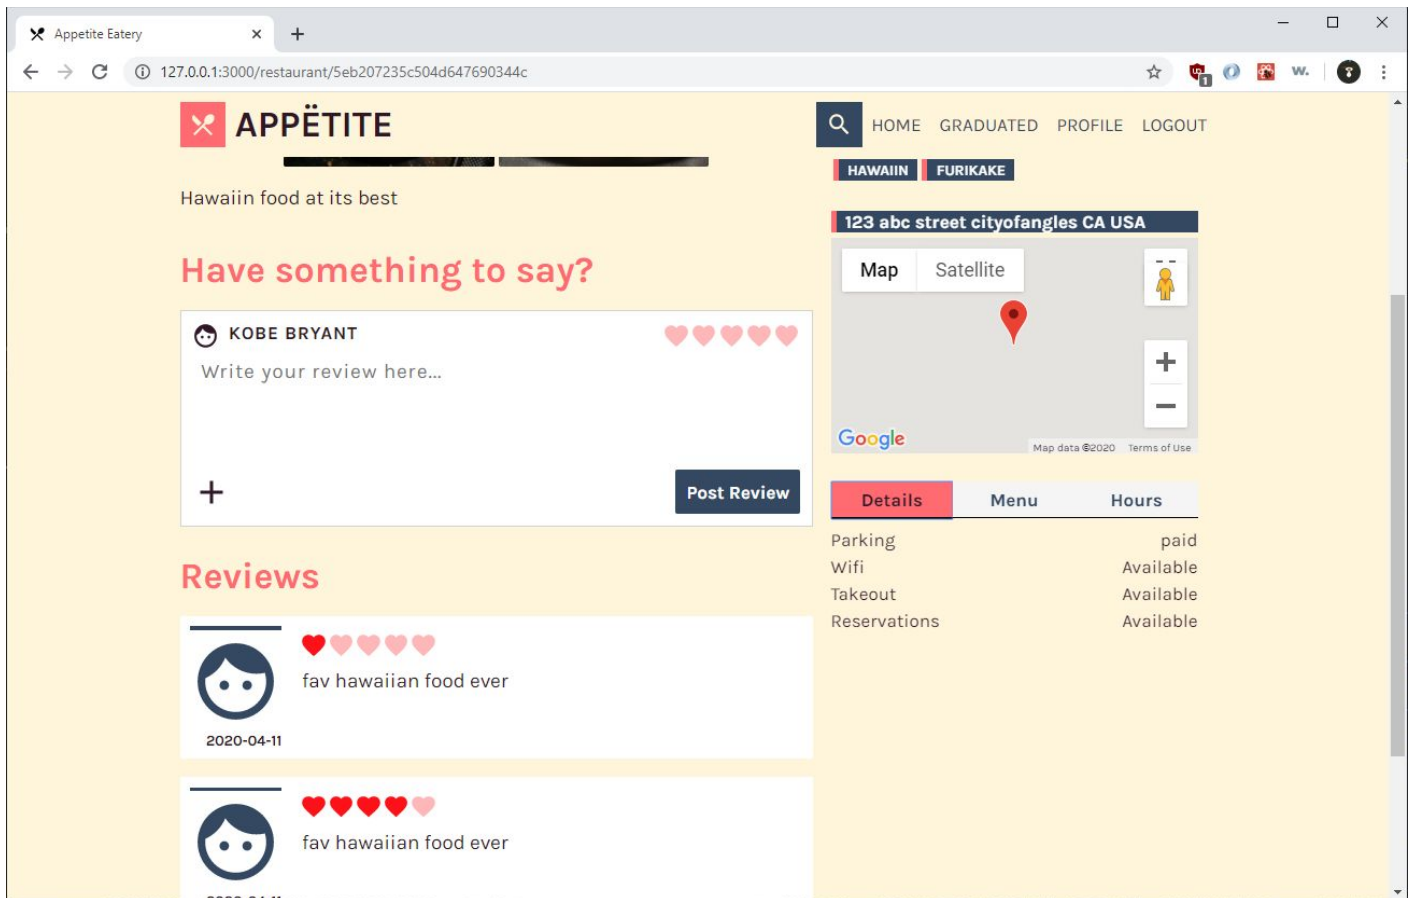

Restaurant page:

Owner accounts, regular users (patron accounts), and not signed in users can view individual restaurants. If an owner views a restaurant they own, they will have an additional option to edit the page. However, owner accounts cannot leave reviews for any restaurant. Patron accounts cannot submit restaurants therefore cannot edit restaurants. However, they can leave reviews for any restaurants.
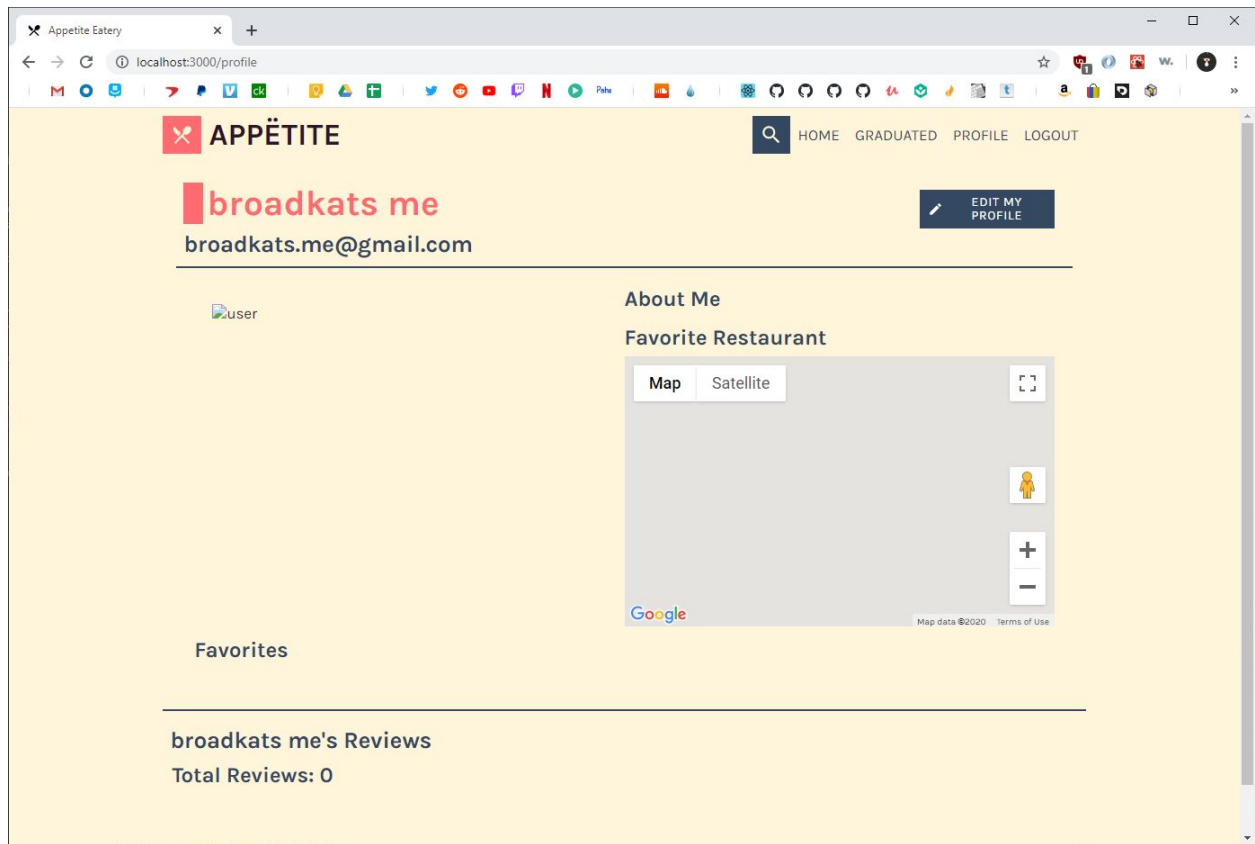

Profile Page:

The profile is exclusive to patron accounts. On this page they can view their profile to see their past reviews and their favorite restaurants. They may also upload a picture of themselves and edit the contents of their profile.
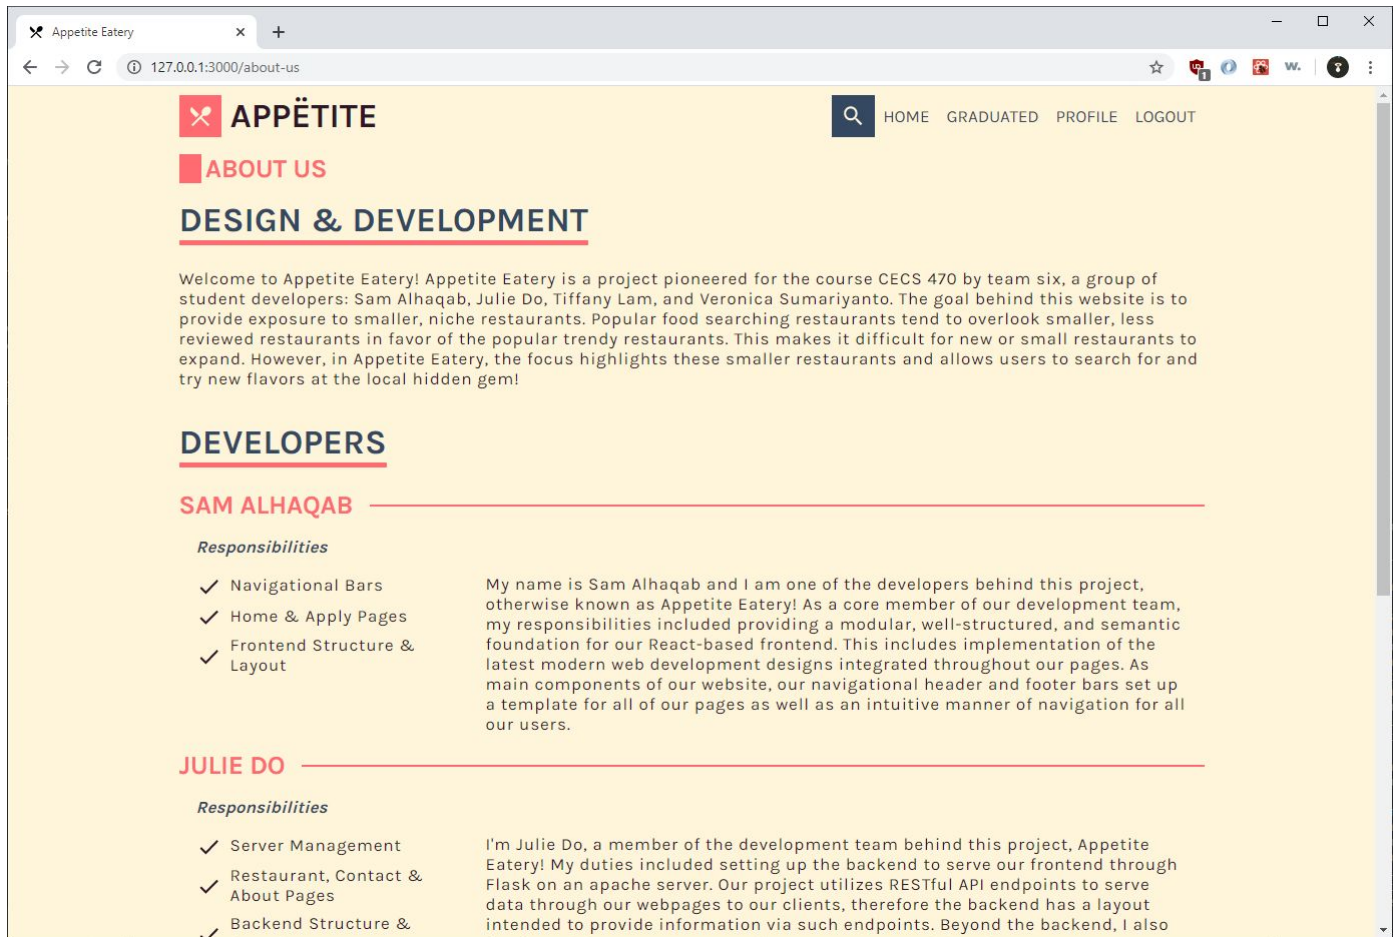

About us page:

The about us page features a design and development section followed by a developer section for each of our four developers.
